

Understanding Group Therapy and Consent to Treatment for Adolescents

The success of group therapy depends upon a high degree of trust between you, your group facilitators and fellow group members. This document has been prepared to fully inform you and your parents about what to expect from group therapy and from your group facilitators.

Understanding Group Therapy

Group therapy is a process of understanding more about yourself and others in a safe environment. In group you will have the opportunity to explore patterns of thinking and behaving that are similar to how you relate to others in your life. Objectives of group therapy include, but are not limited to:

- Develop skills to assist you in reaching your goals
- Feel a sense of support from other group members
- Understand more about yourself and your family system
- Identify and explore thoughts, feelings and behaviors that hold you back
- Learn how to improve relationships with others

You are welcome to share as much or as little about yourself while in the group, however, the more open you are the better experience you will have. Please ask questions at any time. The more deeply you understand the process of therapy, the more effectively you will be able to incorporate positive change into your life.

Your Group Facilitators and the Therapeutic Relationship

Your group facilitators are Karin Thebus, Psy.D. and Melissa Hansen, Psy.D. Both Dr. Thebus and Dr. Hansen are Registered Psychological Assistants in the state of California. Thus, they are pre-licensed clinicians who work under the supervision of Rochelle Perper, Ph.D., PSY23090. Psychological Assistants are registered by the California Board of Psychology and can perform all of the same duties as a licensed Psychologist.

The relationship between you and your group facilitators is special and unique. You will be sharing information in group that is sensitive and personal. With time, you may come to feel close to your facilitators and may wish to spend time with her in a more social environment. However, in order to protect your confidentiality and maintain professionalism, group facilitators and group members do not socialize together outside of group time. Under no circumstances is it ever okay for a therapist or group facilitator to be romantically or sexually engaged with you or another group member.

The role of your group facilitators

Our philosophy and approach to group therapy is the belief that this is your group. Each group member will have an equal say in what topics will be discussed and what format feels most beneficial. Your group facilitator's primary responsibility is to create an atmosphere of safety and support in order for you to get the most out of group. Your group facilitator will encourage each group member to be honest, vulnerable, and respectful about his or her feelings and observations in the group. If you are ever feeling unsafe in group, talk with your group facilitator. If for any reason you experience any negative reactions or blocks towards participation, please share this with the group. Your voice is your power and your right.

Potential Benefits of Group Therapy

Participating in group therapy can result in a number of benefits to you, including a better understanding of your personal goals and values, improving personal relationships, and resolution of specific problems you are facing in your life. It is important to recognize that therapy is not magic and change does not occur overnight. Your willingness to participate fully in group and your openness to take feedback from your facilitators and other group members will play a role in how much you gain in therapy. In particular, the extent to which you are open and honest about yourself will play a role in how quickly you can achieve your goals.

Knowing the Risks of Group Therapy

There can be discomfort involved in participating in group therapy. You may remember unpleasant events, or experience feelings of anger, fear, anxiety, frustration, loneliness, helplessness, or other unpleasant feelings. If these distressful emotions arise during your therapy, please talk with your group and with your group facilitator.

During the process of group therapy, it is normal to have intense feelings and reactions to other group members or even towards your group facilitators. Again, these are understandable emotions that should be discussed and processed in the group setting. If you believe that group is not the most appropriate setting for you to heal and grow, you have several options available to you:

1. You can receive individual therapy as well as group therapy
2. You can consider just participating in individual therapy with one of the group facilitators, another member of the Therapy Changes team, or from an outside referral
3. Your group facilitator can assist you in finding another group that is a better fit for your needs

Confidentiality

It is important that you feel comfortable in group to talk freely about whatever is bothering you. Sometimes you might want to discuss things that you do not want your parents or guardians to know about. You have the expectation of privacy in group sessions. As a general rule, group facilitators do not talk to your parents about what you discuss in group without your permission. However, there are some exceptions to this rule. In some situations, in accordance with professional ethics and California law, your facilitator may disclose information without your permission. Some of the circumstances where disclosure is required by California law are: 1) If you, another minor, a dependent person or an elder adult is being abused; 2) If you are in danger of hurting yourself, someone else or another person's property; 3) When a family member communicates to your facilitator that you present a danger to others

If you are doing things that could cause serious harm to you or someone else, your facilitator will use her professional judgment to decide whether a parent or guardian should be informed. In these situations, your facilitator will talk with you about her concerns and discuss the best way to include your family in order to get the support that you need.

Group member's agreement for confidentiality

All members of the group will be asked to agree to a high level of confidentiality in the group sessions. This means that each participant agrees not to share any other group member's identifying and personal information with others. It is appropriate to share your personal reaction and feelings about group with others, but please do not share other people's stories with anyone outside of the group.

Fees

The fee for each group session is $45.00. Payment is requested at the beginning of every group session. Some group members may choose to pay in advance for services rendered on a monthly basis. If you pay in advance and have an excused absence, then that payment will be held as a credit for future sessions.

Payment can be made by debit or credit card, cash or check payable to ‘Therapy Changes’. As the administrative costs of running a practice change, session fees may be adjusted accordingly. In such cases, your group facilitator will discuss the adjusted fee with you or your parent/guardian at least 30 days before a change will come into effect.

Time spent on your behalf

In addition to the time spent in group, time spent on your behalf outside of group may be charged at $120.00 per hour. This time might include, but is not limited to: consultations with other treatment providers, reading or writing documents, family therapy or report writing. Typically, any time exceeding 20 minutes outside of the regularly scheduled group sessions is subject to additional charge.

Electronic Communications

It is important to be aware that electronic communication, such as e-mail, is not secure. It can be relatively easily accessed by unauthorized people and can compromise your privacy and confidentiality. E-mails, in particular, are vulnerable to such unauthorized access due to the fact that servers have unlimited and direct access to all e-mails that go through them. A non-encrypted e-mail, such as your group facilitator’s email, is even more vulnerable to unauthorized access. Although your facilitator’s emails are not encrypted, her office computer is equipped with a firewall, a virus protection and a password.

E-mail is a helpful tool for asking general questions of your facilitator, confirming appointments, and conveying relevant information and updates. However, e-mail should not be used as a substitute for therapy. Your group facilitator will not conduct therapy via email, and in such cases that lengthy or disclosing emails are received; she will invite you to talk about it during group. Please notify your therapist if you decide to avoid or limit, in any way, the use of e-mail. Otherwise, your therapist may communicate with you via e-mail when necessary or appropriate. Please do not use e-mail for emergencies and please note that e-mails, faxes, etc. are all part of the clinical records.

Online reviews and social media

We understand that the use of the internet, online reviews, and social media impact virtually all aspects of our lives – especially as teens. Please be aware of the implications of posting information about your group therapy online! If you post an online review, status update, tweet, or blog about your experience in therapy, you are publicly acknowledging a therapist-client relationship and have thus waived your right to privacy. Please consider any potential negative impact that this could have either today or in your future.

Social networking & internet searches

In order to protect your privacy, it is our policy not to follow you electronically. For example, your group facilitators will not Google you, view your Facebook page, ‘friend’ you on Facebook, or follow you on Twitter. Exceptions to this may include instances of safety or situations of acute crisis.

Emergencies

Your therapist can be reached during normal business hours Monday through Friday by calling Therapy Changes at 619-275-2286. Please note that she may not be immediately available to handle emergency situations. If you are in need of emergency assistance, call ‘911’ or the San Diego Crisis Line at 1-888-724-7240. Unless otherwise specified, phone messages will be returned by your therapist within 24 hours.

Therapy Changes

Consistent Attendance

It is very important that you consistently attend scheduled group therapy sessions. Although illness, unexpected events or vacations may occasionally interrupt your therapy, consistent attendance plays a large role in helping you, and your fellow group members achieve your desired goals. Please be aware that your absences negatively influence the progress of yourself and the other group members. If for any reason you are not able to attend a group session, please inform your group facilitator.

Conclusion of Group Therapy

There are many different levels of care that therapists provide. Although group therapy is a very helpful tool for many people, the level of care offered at Therapy Changes and with this group may sometimes not be the best match to your needs. If at any point during therapy your facilitator assesses that she is not effective in helping you reach your goals in the group setting, she will provide you and your parent/guardian with a number of referrals that may be of help. We ask that you give the group a month’s notice when you are ready to leave in order to say goodbye fully.

In the event that I am suddenly unable to continue to provide professional services or to maintain client records due to incapacitation or death, I have designated a trusted licensed psychologist as my professional executor. My professional executor would be given access to my client records and may contact you directly to inform you of my death or incapacity; to provide access to your records; to provide psychological services or to facilitate continued care with another qualified professional.
